TYPES OF WRAP AND DESIGN

Vehicle wraps come in various forms, each offering unique ways to transform the appearance of a vehicle. A partial wrap is a popular option that covers only a portion of the vehicle, typically emphasizing specific areas like the doors or windows. This allows for a dynamic design while maintaining a balance between coverage and cost. On the other hand, a full wrap envelops the entire vehicle, providing a comprehensive canvas for eye-catching graphics, branding, or intricate designs. Full wraps are a powerful branding tool, turning vehicles into mobile billboards. Decals, another option, involve applying individual graphics or stickers strategically on the vehicle's surface.

Decals are versatile, allowing for customization without completely covering the vehicle. Whether it's a subtle accent or a bold, head-turning statement, these various vehicle wrap options cater to different preferences and branding needs, offering businesses and individuals creative ways to make an impact on the road.
